

Hannah's Adventures in Missions

The first two weeks of January we had kids camps: Jan 2-5 was the older group, and I worked in the kitchen, Jan 8-11 was the younger group and I was a counselor. I was really grateful to be part of the camp staff; it was an excellent way to start off the year excited about working with kids.

This year I'm going to have more responsibility in my job at DESEO. Last year I was a teacher's assistant, and this year I'm going to continue in that role most of the week, and teach in five classes by myself. I've also been moved from working with tutoring/basketball in the afternoons to being the director's assistant in CANTO, the children's choir. I am both nervous and excited about these challenges; I'm hoping that I pick up new skills and develop confidence in my abilities to responsibly manage a full schedule.

Prayer Requests

My uncle Craig had a brain aneurysm on Sunday, and he's been doing incredibly well. He had surgery to treat a brain bleed caused by the aneurysm Monday morning, and since then he has been able to walk, talk, and feed himself. Please continue to pray for his healing.

We start in schools February 12! Please pray for me as I start teaching classes by myself.

The last few days have been really hard for me mental health wise, please pray for my relationship with God and for me to give myself more grace and kindness. I have seen that people here are more than willing to be a support system if I will let them, and I'm grateful God sent me here for so many reasons.

Much Love,
Hannah Baker
